Villagers Flee as Mount Etna Rumbles Again

Mount Etna's mighty volcano erupted through a second crater with a foar today, spewing forth smoke, glowing rocks and ashes for an hour.

Sicilian peasants, returning to their slope - side villages, were forced to flee again. They evacuated the mountain during Sunday's eruption. Volcano experts feared the 10,758-foot volcano, biggest in Europe, was on the verge of spilling out a giant flow of lages and vineyards on its

The central crater of the volcano erupted Sunday with a violence unmatched in modern times. The crater had been long dormant. Today's explosion came from the more active northeastern crater.

Sunday's explosion hurled huge chunks of lava into the air and a mushroom-shaped cloud shot up five miles with the speed of an express train. The slopes of the mountain trembled.

The Italian navy radio centre at Messina said today it had been deluged with calls from ships at sea reporting the "atomic style" cloud and a rain of volcanic dust as far as yards and pine groves on the slopes and damaged automobile tops in Piedimonte, 10 miles away.

volcano settled down to a calm so unusual for Etna that the silence itself was ominous.

Volcano experts said it could be the quiet before the storm; that it might presage a great flow of lava from the crater to the sea, sweeping everything in its path.

The University of Catania's Prof. Alfred Rittman said he could find no record of an Etna disturbance bigger than

He said it was more powerful than one in 1928 in the flow of lava coursed down the mountainside, wiped out one village, partly destroyed another and caused $10 million worth of damage.

Rittman sent a team of experts up the tortuous, lava-strewn southern slope of Etna after dark Sunday night to sound the volcano's inner rumblings and try to determine slopes, where most of the cin-ders and ash fell Sunday, appealed for national police re-inforcements to stand by in case they needed help in mov-ing out quickly.

Rittman said it was five days between the 1928 erup tion and the start of the lava

The volcano has erupted some 500 times in the past 2,400 years and claimed the lives of an estimated one million persons.

Great Expectations

MR. HOWARD GREEN HAS always been one of the ablest members of the Canadian Government but he must also be the most unhappy. For all his hopes of disarmament and a better international climate have suddenly failed for reasons entirely outside his control. More than that, all his bold forecasts of new independent imaginative foreign policy so differ-ent from that of the former Government have also failed.

Mr. Green announced a few months ago that Canada no longer would be an "honest broker" be-tween its great friends, Britain and the United States. Instead, it would take a line of its own, speak up in international conferences and act as a natural leader among the middle powers. As was said here at the time, this seemed an attractive promise but, like so many others, was excessive and unrealistic. So it turned out.

As Mr. Charles Lynch, one of Ottawa's ablest correspondents, writes in the Southam newspapers 'For Howard Green the collapse of the Geneva disarmament negotiations represents a failure on what he himself had made a major item of Canadian diplomatic policy. It would, of course, be fatuous to suggest that Mr. Green was respon-sible for the Geneva flasco . . . But it was Mr. Green who made disarmament his middle name, who held out such high hopes for the Geneva talks and who promised that Canada's contribution to a successful outcome would be substantial."

It is now clear, says Mr. Lynch, that Mr. Green failed at Geneva "to bring forward policy as bold as the words that he was uttering. These words, it will be recalled, had to do with Canada's determination to play an independent role, not to have its arm twisted, to provide leadership, and to speak at the disarma-ment table on behalf of the middle powers and the smaller nations of the world . . . Canada's contribution to the talks consisted of little more than Mr. Green's brave uttered here at home. In the conference room itself there is no evidence that we played any more significant a part than we had in previous disarmament negotiations over the past ten years when we were merely among those present

These are harsh words about Mr. Green, perhaps too harsh. Does Mr. Lynch suppose that with any conceivable formula Canada could have saved the Geneva negotiations when they had been so obviously doomed by the collapse of the Summit?

No, Mr. Green was caught, like other Western statesmen, in an earthquake which he had not precipitated and could not possibly prevent

His real mistake was not made at Geneva but at Ottawa when he exaggerated Canada's power and promised far more than he or any Canadian Government could possibly deliver.

It was easy for him to disparage the record of Mr. Pearson as minister of external affairs, to suggest that our historic role as honest broker and interpreter between friends was obsolete and a little humiliating. But Canada will be fortunate indeed if Mr. Green can retain for Canada the international role, reputation and influence built up by Mr. Pearson through years of patient diplomacy.

For all Mr. Green's abilities and splendid character, Canada's inter-national stature has been declining for several years. All this is not Mr Green's fault by any means but the result of world conditions. The true criticism of him is that his expectations were excessive, his promises too large. Nevertheless, our opinion of Mr. Green as a man is so high that we expect to see him at his best in adversity. Now that he is down to earth again, his step should

Bonds Without Debt

THE PROVINCIAL GOVERN-ment should have no difficulty in selling its new bond issue of $25 millions when it is issued at an attractive interest rate and is always redeemable at par. Mr. Bennett is offering the public a good investment.

But note that Mr. Bennett himself is offering it. He gives a ceremonial breakfast party in Vancouver, calls the leading brokers together and arranges with them to sell the new bonds. The public is assured, however, that the Government has no debt and will never borrow any more money. By an interesting fiction this money is not borrowed by the Government at all, though Mr. Bennett supervises the berrowing and will soon boast of his success in ing the bonds. The money is borrowed on behalf of the B.C.

Hydro Commission. And what is the Hydro Commission? It is an agent and creature of the Government, and to see that it remains so in fact as well as theory two members of the cabinet sit on the Commission, making sure that it does as the Government de-

Who pays the interest on the new bonds and who will repay the principal? No one but the customers the Hydro Commission in their electrical bills, no one but the people of British Columbia.

Integrity at Prince George

CCORDING TO ONE CLASsical allusion, messengers bearing ill tidings were put to death. That didn't change the facts of the message they brought. It merely proved that the recipients who ordered the execution were not very bright and not very realistic.

A 33-member rump of the 220-member Prince George Board of Trade seems to be reviving the practice in modified form when it tells the Prince George Citizen it "should only print stories that are optimistic or reflect credit on the

The Citizen has informed the public that only 10 men have been employed on the Pacific Northern Railway project since construction of the marshalling yards started at the end of last month. It has added that unemployed are attracted to Prince George by PNR publicity and find no work there (a point made by the Prince George city council which escapes Board of Trade criticism) and that the crime rate is increasing

In the light of these disclosures, says one board member, Prince George can do without the Citizen which made them.

Certainly it can, but at a price. The price of ignorance due to lack of information could be high.

The Citizen has apparently performed the service of presenting the facts-and has thereby honored the traditions of a reputable and upright newspaper.

Someone should tell the critical members of the Prince George Board of Trade that there is a place for fairy tales, but that news news, and an intelligent public must be kept informed. That public will not even know what time it is the Board of Trade, in cloudy weather, forces it to depend on a sundial which records only the Road to Extinction

MANKIND'S INTELLIGENCE, and now his help in restoring it which has failed in even more, apparently comes too late. which has failed in even more important projects, may not be sufficient to save the last, whooping cranes of America. Experts at the University of Saskatchewan say that the doom of the entire species may have been sealed already, even though its numbers have increased. from 15 in 1943 to the total of 39 recorded last year.

This increase, it appears, may be deceptive. The breeding stock is now so small that in-breeding reduces the vitality of the surviving fowl and they probably will die out In the course of a few generations.

Man first slaughtered all but a pitiable relic of a once great species

Moreover, The Winnipeg Free Press reports, two other species, the canvasback and the red-head duck, are in danger because man shoots too many of them on the prairies and drains the natural swamps where they nest. There is still time, however, to save the ducks with sound conservation measures which the prairie governments are under-

In all of these humble events the thoughtful man may see a parable somewhat greater significance. Millions of human beings have been needlessly destroyed in recent years but it may still be possible to save the species if it has as much intelligence as a crane or a duck.

Innocents Who Inspire Awe Question of Tone

SALAMANDERS and newts do not resemble frogs and toads very closely and yet they belong to the same group. In fact they should be considered the most typical members of the amphibians since they are old-fashioned enough to still possess a tail.

In body form they resemble a lizard and consequently they are often confused with confused reptiles by people who are not too ob-. Car servant. The lack of scales ficient to distinguish any salamander from any lizard, however, and the preference for a damp habitat on the part of the former is also a good

Carl

For some unknown reason sala relatives manders and received more than their share superstitious attention in the past and are still viewed with deep suspicion by many people who should know better. No animals can be more innocuous than these gentle creatures yet they have inspired awe and real fear in mankind through many ages.

For one thing these crawling amphibians were believed to have the ability to withstand fire and were commonly depicted in heraldry surrounded by flames. Even today some implements used in dealing with fire are called "salamanders" and the old stories persist.

Some of our native Indians, too, greatly feared these animals, especially the larval forms commonly found in water.

It is said that Indians in certain parts of the upper Fraser Valley re-fused to travel up certain tributary streams because of the presence of salamanders, believing that they enter the mouth of a sleeping person, eat the heart and cause death:

We have at least eight different kinds of salamanders represented in British Columbia, most of them in the coastal or southern portion of the province. Six of the species occur on Vancouver Island but some of these are rarely seen.

Our most common member is the sometimes abundant in lakes and permanent ponds particularly in the spring and summer months when spawning takes place. Newts tend to keep under cover by day and are therefore most readily seen at night by shining a light into the shallow water. The fall and winter months are spent on land in the shelter of forest debris, under rotting loss or in similar places. logs, or in similar places.

Another common species is the dark colored Northwestern salamander found in lakes of fairly high elevation, for example in the Forbidden Plateau, and in ponds and ditches at sea level in the Part Panfrew Jordan River district. the Port Renfrew-Jordan River district. This is the salamander which lays eggs in the large jelly masses often found in spring in standing or slowly moving water along the roadside.

The long-toed salamander with a yellow stripe down the back also appears in ponds in March and April to spawn but for some reason it is rarely seen in our area. is the fundamental requirement of his whole campaign. But he blundered into a contradiction in making his case. At one point he said he could understand seen in our area.

The remaining three species found Vancouver Island, namely the redbacked salamander, the clouded sala-mander and the red salamander are entirely terrestrial in habit. Eggs are not laid in water but in a damp place, per-haps in a rotting log, and the young pass through a larval stage within the egg, hatching as a miniature of the parent. Species in this group are considered to be more "advanced" in that they are less dependent upon water as compared with most amphibians and are therefore of great interest to the naturalist with an enquiring mind.

Of the three species the red-backed is the most abundant. A favorite haunt is beneath the forest debris along the banks of Goldstream just below The next in abundance, the clouded salamander, has tree-climbing tendencies; it is occasionally found in trunk cavities some distance above the frunk cavities some enough, although widely spread on Vancouver Island and most of the adjacent islands the reported from the mainland of British

The rarest on the Island is the delicate-looking red salamander reported so far only from the Cowichan Lake but probably present in other similar parts.

Perhaps it is fortunate that not one of these is of economic importance. Consequently, apart from a certain newt, a salamander with rough skin amount of disturbance of their habitat and a yellow or orange belly. It is by logging and by other activities of man they will be allowed to continue living as they have for a very long time in the past.

As Our Readers See It

Peace-But What Price? The stirring letter of July 12 setting forth the devastating effects of atomic explosion says, "The only protection for humanity is world-wide peace." World-wide peace is indeed the ideal solution, but could there not be a danger in these days of crises that we might be tempted to surrender certain foundation principles in a desperate effort to attain peace?

The New Testament gives warning of a "peace and safety" cry that would not result in the protection of humanity because it is a false cry and fore-shadows "sudden destruction." (4 Thes-salonians 5:3). So let us be sure that in our efforts for peace that we unite in the true "peace and safety" cry which is founded on the Ten Commandments of Exodus 20. "For long life, and peace, shall they add to thee." (Proverbs 3:2).

The late Peter Marshall said, "The nation that is obedient to the laws of God would change the world." And the Psalmist wrote, "Great peace have they that love thy law." (Psalms 119:165). PEACE-LOVER.

The Drive for Unity CROM a platform of unity, Senator John Kennedy accepted the presi-dential nomination of the Democratic

By MAX FREEDMAN

Was Senator Kennedy wise and farwas senator refinedy whe and lat-sighted in referring yet again to the irrevelancy of all religious tests in a presidential campaign? He clearly wanted to put his case before the largest audience of his career and to do so at the very start of the campaign in his own decisive language. All the same, it is very much a matter of judgment whether Senator Kennedy's renewed affirmation of his freedom in political matters from all clerical influence has not succeeded in giving revived emphasis to the Catholic issue. He might have been better advised to have de-layed his statement until the course of the campaign established the fact that he was the victim of unfair religious prejudice. Yet here surely is the one where Senator Kennedy's judgment deserves the greatest respect.

Details Reserved

Senator Kennedy decided that he would save his detailed discussion of foreign policy and fivil rights for another occasion. He was eager on Friday night to establish three points: that he would be the resolute and unchal-lenged leader of the Democratic Party, that he spoke for a new generation of American political thought, and that he would follow the unusual policy of asking for many sacrifices from the American people instead of promising them quick solutions. In his speech Mr. Stevenson had one phrase that was an index of his own character. He spoke of the duty of a leader."in conquering the hard necessity of decision." No one can believe that Senator Kennedy not only refused to shrink from the duties of the presidency; he gives the impres-sion of relishing those tasks.

Senator Kennedy's address contained passages of inspired phrasing and lofty appeal but it was hardly his greatest speech. Some of the most vivid passages indeed had been used in earlier speeches on less celebrated occasions but the free nations have been given a hint, a prophetic one, of his splendid and cious gifts.

Stevenson Touch

The fall from power, said Burke of Catham, can sanctify a great character. Mr. Stevenson's fall has been complete and humiliating. He gained fewer votes at the convention than Senator Syming-He suffered the cruel humiliation of being told over the phone by Mayor Daley of Chicago, with curt brutality, that he no longer was the favorite son of Illinois and would receive only two votes from that delegation. Mayor Daley is so commonplace that it requires a de-termined effort of will on his part before he can rise to the level of a mediocrity, and yet it was this coarse politician who delivered the last stroke of contemptuous dismissal. But Mr. Stevenson is not a candidate for the shadows. He has more than the cheers of the galleries to offset the indifference of the delegates. Men have cried be-cause of his defeat, and that is a nobler crown of glory than most victories of

If Senator Kennedy can arouse the same generous emotion and affection, nothing will keep him from becoming the next President of the United States.

DEMOCRAT CONFIDENCE

By JOSEPH ALSOP

The Smell of Hope

THE smell of hope set the Los Angeles Democratic convention apart from all the others held since the war. A large majority of the party leaders, petty politicos and fatcats there assembled seriously ex-pect to win the Presidency next November. At the Democratic the tribute of an accredited guardian of the liberal faith to the Kennedy-Johnson ticket. And Senator Johnson tried valiantly, though hardly with unblemished distinction, to accustom himself to the unfamiliar role of being second in com-mand. It was an impressive display of party unity; and since the Democrats have many more registered voters than the Republications, the demonstration carried its calculated warning to Mr.

Senator Kennedy who pointed to the why so many people supported Mr. Eisenhower; but later he compared Mr. Eisenhower to Buchanan, Taft and Cool-

Mr. Eisenhower is not better than this inglorious group, then it will not be too hard for Mr. Nixon to be the deserved heir of the Republican administration. In short, Senator Kennedy cannot hope to strike at Mr. Nixon without also striking at Mr. Eisenhower, and this attack will inevitably bring the President more actively into the campaign at Mr. Nixon's side. Even with his diminished prestige Mr. Eisenhower will convention in 1948, no such expectations any one at all except perhaps Harry S. Truman; and one can be pretty sure that at convention time, Truman himself secretly regarded Thomas E. Dewey as a better money bet. In 1952, before Adlai E. Stevenson's campaigning flaws had been revealed, there was some hope of victory, but no solid expectation. In 1956, there was damp prophetic discouragement.

But this time, the deals that have been made are counted on to pay off. The expectant Ambassadors are all but ordering their top hats already. people who think they have liens on Cabinet posts are close to telephoning Washington real estate agents, for suitably dignified houses in George-

Source of Confidence

What, then, is the reason for this new surge of Democratic confidence? The main reason, of course, is the two-term amendment that forbids the Republicans to draft Dwight D. Eisen hower at the last minute. One leading Democrat has bitterly remarked that "if those damned Republicans hadn't passed that amendment to trample on Franklin Roosevelt's memory, they'd have the President of the United States in the hands of the taxidermists this minute, being stuffed for permanency, and we couldn't win another election in this century."

The remark, though coarse, might accurately reflect the Democratic esti-mate of the President's unvarying permate of the President's unvarying per-sonal appeal, which is so strangely un-affected by the public's varying opinions of the Eisenhower administra-tion. It also suggests the Democratic opinion that Vice-President Richard M. Nixon is not as formidable as he looks.

In this respect, the Democrats seem July 18, 1940 — over hopeful to this reporter. If one can Ottawa: Prime Min judge by the results of rather wideister King assured commons today his speeches were not written by L. W. it is certainly true that Nixon laste. Brockington, KC, Eisenhower's universal appeal. The viceattached to his of president does not have the President's fice to report Can curious power to make voters like him ada's war effort. and give him their votes because he is "a nice man," without particular consideration of his qualities as a national

The shrewdest of the assembled Democrats-those who do not share the widespread underestimate of Nixon make another point which is certainly valid. They say that Nixon is untested in the kind of campaigning he will have to do to win the presidency. He cannot run for president, after all, in the way he ran for the House and Senate in California. He certainly cannot run for the presidency in his sharply partisan man-ner of 1954, 1956 and 1958, when Presi-Eisenhower assigned him "shock-troop" role. He will therefore have to develop a quite new manner.

Republican Trouble

The manner Nixon develops will have to be pretty miraculous, too, in the opin-ion of most of the Democratic bigwigs, because the Republican party is thought to be in bad trouble at the moment. For this view, there is considerable evidence.

The inquiring Dr. Gallup has just reported the popularity rating of the Republican party is very near the 1936 low. The last man-to-man polling test between Nixon and John F. Kennedy of Massa-chusetts showed Kennedy a couple of points ahead. Yet the record shows that Democratic contenders have always run more poorly in July than in November.

Again, the Democratic analysts are cheered by the total collapse of the strategy which the Republicans were so hopefully preparing last winter. In this respect, the Republicans have got what they deserve. They planned to go before the electorate on a platform of peace and prosperity, with full knowledge that the peace part of the platform, at least, was straight Madison Avenue stuff.

Peace Plank Destroyed

The failure of the summit meeting, the contempt for the United States displayed by the Soviet leadership, the humiliations that have been suffered in these last weeks, have knocked the intended peace plank in the Republican platform into a cocked hat. With steel production at 50 per cent of capacity, the prosperity plank is also a bit wormeaten in places. The Republicans will therefore have to pay the price that always must be paid by those who try to do it with mirrors, and then find that the mirrors are cracked.

Such are the reasons for the surge of Democratic confidence, Most of them are solid reasons, solidly rooted in the facts of the existing political situation. This Democratic confidence is also a significant fact in itself; since a confident party usually makes a better fight. But it very much remains to be seen whether the confidence will be justified by events.

Vitamins

Emeritus Consultant in Medicine, Maye Clinic and Emeritus Professor of Medicine, Mayo Foundation

I fear that a while ago, in a hurried answer to a question, I made too sweeping a statement about my very rarely having seen a disease which I could definitely and positively ascribe to a lack of vitamins. I should have said that 50 years ago, when I did general practice. I occasionally saw children with rickets. due often to a lack of vitamin D. A few times in my life 4 have seen someone with what looked like Beri-beri, a disease due to lack of vitamin B, but, in each case treatment with vitamin B did not help the patient, hence, apparently, the injury to the person's nerves was due to some other cause. I have, of course, seen rare cases of "pernicious anemia," and in their cases have worked a miracle by giving vitamin B 12. I have sometimes suspected that a certain person's skin condition might be helped by giving vitamin A, but I cannot remember ever having seen any spectacular result after such treatment.

A lack of vitamin C produces scurvy, which used to be a common disease of sailors and explorers. Once in my life I saw a man a trapper in the Canadian north country—who said he once had had scurvy, but I never saw a man with symptoms that I could be sure of. And here is an important point. Some of my doctor friends have said, "But Alvarez, you know that there can be thousands of 'sub-clinical' cases in which the person's feelings of poor health could be due to a lack of vitamins, but in which there are as yet no characteristic symptoms or signs to prove this." My answer to such men is, "You may well be right; I would expect you to be right; but when you go into a realm in which you can't prove anything, l have little interest in following you, and I cannot argue with you. I won't tell a patient he has an avitaminosis (disease due lack of a vitamin) unless I am so sure of it that I would be willing to demonstrate fellow and his illness before 1,000 hardheaded doctors at a big convention.

As I have said here before, the editors of a big book published a while ago, filled with abstracts of the world's literature on vitamin E, concluded that it is of no definite value in the treatment of any disease. Yet some men think it is of value; they think they have helped patients with it, but when it comes to the appraisal of the value of a drug any man can be fooled. Vitamin K, of course, is of great value in the cases of persons who have to be operated on while they are jaundiced. It keeps them from oozing blood from the operative wounds.

Niacin cures pellagra, but in my own private practice, I have never seen a case of this disease. I understand that usually today one has to go to a slum, perhaps in Puerto Rico, to find a case. Occasionally, I have seen a person who never drank milk, who got little wrinkles about the corner of his mouth. This appeared to be due to lack of riboflavin, and it cleared up when I gave the medicine.

A while ago I was much impressed by a study made by my old friend. Professor Kark, of Chicago. He wanted to show his students some cases of illness due to lack of vitamin B, and was puzzled when he could not find any in the huge Cook County Hospital. Reasoning correctly that the surest place in which to find avitaminoses would be around Skid Row, where many men live on little besides alcohol, he went down into that region and examined many of the dere-licts. Again, he had great difficulty in finding any cases of illness due definitely to the lack of vitamins.

Years ago, when occasionally I addressed large groups of dietitians, I used to tease them a bit by asking for a shows of hands of those who had seen a single case of proved beriberi, or scurvy. Usually, no one raised a hand. Then I said, "Isn't it remarkable that most of you and many of us doctors act with our hospital patients as if all of them were just one jump ahead of the mortician, with some disease due to lack of vitamins!' People who, at the close of World War II, failed to read the long reports of nutritional. studies made on the emaciated prisoners in Germany and Japanese stockades failed to note the surprise of the investigators when they did not find—as theoretically they should have found—thousands of cases of illness due to lack of vitamins. As I rememthe investigators gained the impression that what these emaciated prisoners needed most was not so much certain vitamins as much food in general, and more protein in

Helena Rubinstein's Tree of Life Herbessence

Something old, something new, something tried and all things true—Herbessence, the youngest start on Helena Rubinstein's Tree of Life. This happy mingling of the timeless qualities of herbs with the latest modern scientific developments comes as a liquid that skips lightly over your skin for thorough, thoughtful cleansing by day or night. For centuries famous beautifiers have known the potentiality of herbs, and science has recently confirmed that they contain important enzymes and valuable vitamins, Madame Rubinstein has master-minded their placement into an emulsified form aquiver with such delights as parsley, cucumber and camomile flower. Now you can spread herbal essences easily, smoothly over your face, letting this tonic emulsion loosen dust and oil particles while leaving your skin deeply cleansed and as lightly fragrant as the scent of the herbs that bless it so. As seen in Harper's Bazaar.

OUR VERY OWN GARDENING GUIDE The DAW Theory Reaffirmed

There is nothing especially new about the DAW

It has been propounded in this space before. I have reason to believe it has been successfully applied by a number of gardeners in this area. In fact, I have received many letters and calls telling me of the excellent results obtained from the practical application of the DAW theory.

On the other hand, quite a few unfortunate gardeners

have written to say they like the theory, but it won't work.
This is because their wives refuse to accept it.

Let us, then, at this appropriate season, reaffirm the DAW theory, and see what we can do about obdurate

First, to repeat the definition of the theory.

DAW means Dandelions Ain't Weeds.
And the theory is, if Dandelions Ain't Weeds, they must be flowers, and as such should be cherished.
Properly applied, the DAW theory prevents a competent gardener from ever doing any work on his lawn.

If it is true that DAW, then no dandelion can be dug from any lawn at any time.

In fact, the wise gardener will not even mow his lawn, for fear of chopping off a dandelion's delicate little head.

Some wives, however, do not fully appreciate the results, and I would suggest that their husbands apply a little psychology.

At this season of the year, one of the most colorful displays of blooms in Beacon Hill Park is to be seen in two separate dandelion fields, near the Tallest Totem and across the road from the cricket pitch.

Take your wife to Beacon Hill Park. Tell her you read in the paper that the dandelions are at their best right now, and you wouldn't miss this display

When she hears you gasp with admiration as you gaze

on this breath-taking sea of golden beauty, she's bound to agree with you that Dandelions Ain't Weeds. And you can loaf happily for ever after.

Add a New Bun or Chignon For Extra Evening Glamor By PENNY SAVER

Short haircuts are wonderful for the summer months but there are times when you yearn to be able to go to an evening "do," looking glamorous, with your hair in a soft chignon or bun. When this happens, just add one of the figure eight chignons or buns that are selling in one downtown

These are made of dynel and look exactly like real hair Similarity doesn't end there—you can do almost as much to these as you would to the real thing! They can be washed easily by swishing through warm water. Hang them up to dry. One word of caution, though, don't rub!

Buns and chignons can be combed and brushed, too. There are six shades from which to choose. These are blonde, light brown, medium brown, dark brown, black and grey.

If your son or daughter is going off to camp soon or if you, yourself, are planning what to take on a coming holiday trip, imported plastic scuffies that come complete in matching zippered case are well worth investigating. These cost a mere $1.59 and would take little or no room in a suitcase or kit bag.

Tiny sailboats, fish, beach umbrellas and other motifs decorate padded scuffies and case that come in either yellow, blue or green. Sizes range from four to eight.

I've been wondering where to get the attractive clam digger sets that so many smart young Victoria misses have been wearing lately. Today I found them and if your young daughter hasn't already got a set you'll certainly want to Clam digger pants are in sturdy white cotton with elasticized backs for comfortable fit and slit at bottom hems. Sashes of the same material as the rib tickler tops add a gay splash of color. Tops are in colorful squares of paisley patterned cotton, bringing old fashioned bed quilts to mind They have square necklines, are sleeveless and bottom hems are edged in fluffy white fringe. Sets in sizes three to six sell at $2.95 white sizes eight to 14 cost $3,95.

YOURS A RUTTED "COUNTRY COTTAGE" ROAD? TRY IT! Chevrolet brings a new level of comfort to your holiday travel. Those picturesque camping trails and concession roads suddenly become fun to drive again. The secret: full-coil suspension. The result: an altogether new kind of smoothness that floats you along every fun-filled mile of the way.

GOT A REAL GOOD HILL IN MIND? TRY IT! It's like having wings on your wheels . . . just one touch of your toe and Chevrolet flies up hills. That's because Chevrolet engines, V8's or thrifty Six, are designed to coast along at normal cruising conditions, yet hold a deep reserve of power for hill-climbing or for everyday highway emergencies.

A FEW LCHOSEN ROA

(THE KIND YOU DRIVE)

PROVE CHEVY'S SUPERIORITY!

The very moment you open the door of a Chevrolet you'll feel that you've left the low-priced field far behind you. Extra features like armrests, twin sunshades, cigarette lighter, footoperated parking brake . . . all these and many more are part of the bargain when you go Chevrolet.

And here's the truly amazing reason for Chevrolet's first place in sales. It costs no more than other cars in its field, less than a lot of 'em, yet you won't find Chevrolet's brand of value anywhere else. That means you'll save now on Chevrolet's low price, and save on your next car when trade-in time finally rolls around. Why not check all the facts before buying? Visit your Chevrolet dealer and take the full measure of Chevrolet's superiority. Do it today!

WHERE THE GOING'S GOOD - IT'S BETTER IN CHEVROLET - That's part of the secret of Chevrolet's success. Even the long sweeping stretches of super highway are more enjoyable. All you have to do is settle back into those comfortable Chevrolet seats and watch the miles flick by. And you'll find that it's the longest distance between gas-stops in a Chevrolet.

PICK OUT A TRAFFIC TANGLE ... AND PICK YOUR WAY THROUGH IT. Chevrolet's surprising that way. You're certain from its comfort, and confidence on the roads that this is a big car. But, in fact, its turning circle and overall dimensions make it one of the very easiest of full-sized cars to thread through the city. Put the fun back into your driving, today. Fun-test Canada's favorite car ... the funtastic '60 Chevrolet.

'BEWITCHED' KILLS SELF

LONDON (AP)-With a police ring closing in, gypsy Jack Smith, 24, shot and killed himself Sunday near his en-campment home. He had been sought since Tuesday when Ethel Collinge was found murdered.

He sought refuge at his caravan home, where his mother, Violet Smith, declared Saturday that Jack was under an evil spell—"the spell of a still tongue." She claimed he had been bewitched some years ago after an unfortunate love affair and would no longer speak to anyone.

ELECTRIC IRON BLAMED FOR ASYLUM BLAZE

GUATEMALA (AP) - An electric iron has been blamed Sunday for a fire that swept through an insane asylum here Thursday. Firemen said a 60-year-old inmate reported she had forgotten to disconnect the iron.

Officials said 155 bodies have been recovered from the ruins of the asylum and about 100 others still are unaccunted for.

Villagers Flee as Mount Etna Rumbles Agai

Mount Etna's mighty volcano erupted through a second crater with a roar today, spewing forth smoke, glowing rocks and ashes for an hour.

Sicilian peasants, returning to their slope - side villages, were forced to flee again. They evacuated the mountain dur-ing Sunday's eruption.

Volcano experts feared the 10.758-foot volcano, biggest in Europe, was on the verge of spilling out a giant flow of lages and vineyards on its slope.

The central crater of the volcano erupted Sunday with a violence unmatched in modern times. The crater had been long dormant. Today's explosion came from the more active northeastern crater.

Three earthquakes rocked the Terni area, 50 miles north of Rome and 350 miles from Etna, early today but there was no indication they were

Sunday's explosion hurled huge chunks of lava into the air and a mushroom-shaped cloud shot up five miles with the speed of an express train. The slopes of the mountain trembled.

Then, late Sunday night, the volcano settled down to a calm so unusual for Etna that the silence itself was ominous.

Volcano experts said it could be the quiet before the storm; that it might presage a great flow of lava from the crater to sea, sweeping everything in its path.

The University of Catania's Prof. Alfred Rittman said he could find no record of an Etna disturbance bigger than

He said it was more powerful than one in 1928 in which the flow of lava coursed down the mountainside, wiped out one village, partly destroyed another and caused $10 million worth of damage.

Rittman sent a team of ex-perts up the tortuous, lavastrewn southern slope of Etna dark Sunday night to sound the volcano's inner rumblings and try to determine what would happen next.

OUR VERY OWN GARDENING GUIDE The DAW Theory Reaffirmed

There is nothing especially new about the DAW

It has been propounded in this space before. I have reason to believe it has been successfully applied by a number of gardeners in this area. In fact, I have received many letters and calls telling me of the excellent results obtained from the practical application of the DAW theory.

On the other hand, quite a few unfortunate gardeners

have written to say they like the theory, but it won't work.
This is because their wives refuse to accept it. Let us, then, at this appropriate season, reaffirm the DAW theory, and see what we can do about obdurate

First, to repeat the definition of the theory.

Pirst, to repeat the definition of the theory.

DAW means Dandellons Ain't Weeds.

And the theory is, if Dandellons Ain't Weeds, they must be flowers, and as such should be cherished.

Properly applied, the DAW theory prevents a competent gardener from ever doing any work on his lawn.

If it is true that DAW, then no dandellon can be dug

from any lawn at any time,

In fact, the wise gardener will not even mow his lawn, for fear of chopping off a dandelion's delicate little head. Some wives, however, do not fully appreciate the results, and I would suggest that their husbands apply a little psychology.

At this season of the year, one of the most colorful displays of blooms in Beacon Hill Park is to be seen in two separate dandelion fields, near the Tallest Totem and across the road from the cricket pitch.

Take your wife to Beacon Hill Park. Tell her you read in the paper that the dandelions are at their best right now, and you wouldn't miss this display for anything.

When she hears you gasp with admiration as you gaze

on this breath-taking sea of golden beauty, she's bound to agree with you that Dandelions Ain't Weeds. And you can loaf happily for ever after.
